

Section 1

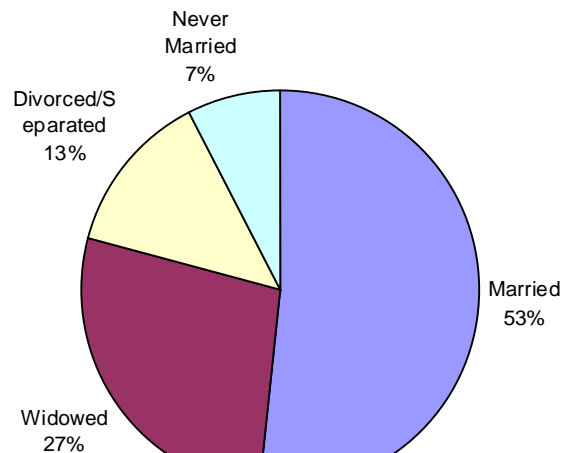

The Medicare Population in 2008

Medicare Beneficiaries,
by Race and Ethnicity

- Seventy-eight percent of beneficiaries were White, 10 percent were Black, 8 percent were Hispanic, and 5 percent were of other racial/ethnic groups.

Medicare Beneficiaries,
by Marital Status

- Most beneficiaries were married or widowed. Few beneficiaries, especially among the aged, were divorced, separated or never married.

Medicare Beneficiaries,
by Living Arrangement

- Nearly half of all beneficiaries lived with their spouses, while 29 percent lived alone, 18 percent lived with children or others, and 5 percent lived in long-term facility care.

Medicare Beneficiaries,
by Years of Schooling

- A little over a quarter of beneficiaries had less than a high school education and 15 percent had some college education.

Community Medicare Beneficiaries,
by Insurance Type

- Forty-nine percent of all Medicare beneficiaries living in the community had some type of private supplemental insurance. An additional 21 percent were in Medicare HMOs, which cover many services in full, thereby making supplemental policies unnecessary. Fourteen percent of beneficiaries received supplemental coverage through Medicaid and 15 percent had no coverage at all.

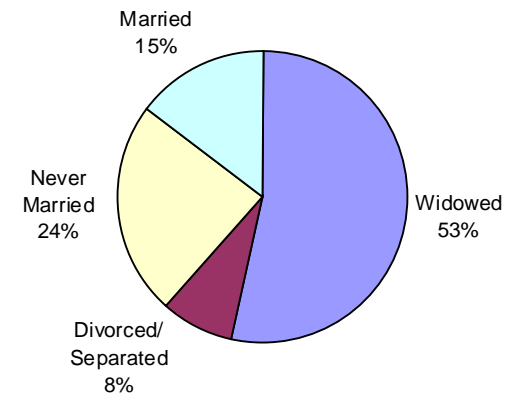

Medicare Beneficiaries in Long-Term Care Facilities, by Age

Medicare Beneficiaries in Long-Term Care Facilities, by Years of Schooling

Medicare Beneficiaries in Long-Term Care Facilities, by Marital Status

- Beneficiaries in long-term care were disproportionately made up of those aged 85 and older (45 percent of long-term care residents versus 13 percent of the whole Medicare population).

- Forty-six percent of beneficiaries who lived in facility care did not complete high school, compared to 25 percent who did not complete high school for the population as a whole.

- Beneficiaries in long-term care were much more likely to be widowed or never married. In fact, only 15 percent of beneficiaries in long-term care facilities were married versus 52 percent for the Medicare population as a whole.